INTRODUCTION

For a number of years the collection of pictures owned by Mr. David C. Lyall of Brooklyn was the goal of a pilgrimage of very many lovers of art, and particularly of those whose predilections were in favor of the French school. He began his collection with the distinct purpose of assembling as thoroughly a representative group of pictures by notable French artists who have flourished during the past fifty or sixty years as it was possible to obtain by careful selection without overloading it with a multiplicity of examples of any one painter or by expanding the collection beyond the limits of a reasonably extensive private gallery by the purchase of large exhibition pictures. With a few exceptions the works are, thus, of cabinet size, and no one of them is, indeed, too large to be properly placed in a room of the average size. Bouguereau's "Crossing the Stream" and Cot's "Springtime," both of them very well-known paintings, are the largest on the list, and two of the most important and interesting of the figure subjects are Jules Breton's "La Fin du Travail" and De Neuville's "The Destruction of the Telegraph Line: An Episode in the Franco-German War." The first of these was painted for Mr. Lyall, and has never been publicly exhibited except in the Salon of 1887.

It is a frequent experience of those who give commissions to artists that the very fact of painting to order tends to weaken the impulse to produce, and the result is, more often than otherwise, somewhat disappointing. But in this fine work by Breton we find all the charm, all the sympathy and all the refined artistic qualities which distinguish his best pictures, and he himself frankly states his opinion in a letter in which he writes: "This picture has been very much praised by my colleagues of the jury," and in a second communication: "You should see how the French and the foreign press praise this picture, which I regard as one of my best."

There is a certain exceptional interest attaching to De Neuville's picture, from the fact that it is the last important work executed by him before his death, which occurred in 1885, the year after the picture was painted. In his letter describing the circumstances under which the work was undertaken and produced, he says: "The incident is described in a very vivid way by Ludovic Halévy in his book, 'L'Invasion.'" And he goes on to say that, for artistic reasons, he changed the uniforms of the Prussian dragoons, and also omitted some of the unpicturesque features of the village of Étretat, where the incident occurred. Many of the figures in the composition are actually portraits, a fact which adds not a little to its historical significance.

It would be easy to multiply interesting stories of a more or less personal character about many of the pictures in the collection, for Mr. Lyall often bought directly from the artists and established friendly relations with them. Certain of the works have become widely known through reproductions, but none of them have been cheapened by being made too familiar. The most casual study of the pictures will induce the conviction that it is a remarkable collection, testifying to the exceptional taste and judgment of the late owner. With the Millets, the Rousseaus, the Daubignys, the Corots as a nucleus, not to mention examples by Courbet, Michel, Gérôme, Delacroix, Diaz and many others, this list covers a wide range of French art, and one for which it would be difficult to find a parallel. The few English and American pictures in the collection make it seem probable that Mr. Lyall, if he had lived, would have studied these schools with the same interest which he showed for the French.

ACHENBACH, OSWALD

Born at Düsseldorf in 1827. He was a pupil of his brother Andreas, and became one of the most eminent of the German landscape painters, his work being distinguished by great conscientiousness and fidelity to certain facts in nature. He received medals at Paris in 1859, 1861 and 1863, and was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in the latter year.

ADAN, LOUIS ÉMILE

Born at Paris in 1839. He was a pupil of Picot and Cabanel, and has loyally carried out the traditions of his masters in his historical and genre pictures. He received medals at the Salon in 1875 and 1882.

BASTIEN-LEPAGE, JULES

Born at Damvillers, Meuse, France, in 1848. He studied under Cabanel in Paris, but soon threw off the shackles of the academic style and became an apostle of the open-air school, striking out a new path for himself and creating a sensation in art circles with his marvellously sympathetic and poetical interpretations of nature. Some of his most important work; notably the "Joan of Arc," is owned in this country. He received medals at the Salon in 1874, 1875 and at the Exposition in 1878, and was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1879. Died in Paris in 1884.

BECKER, CARL LUDWIG FRIEDRICH

Born at Berlin in 1820. He was a student in the Berlin Academy and a pupil of Cornelius, Hess and Von Klover, and held scholarships of the Berlin Academy at Paris and Rome. He was elected vice-president of this Academy and member of the Academy of Vienna and of the Royal Society of Letters and Fine Arts of Belgium. His duties as professor have not prevented him from diligently pursuing his art, and he is well known as a painter at home and abroad.

BÖHM, PAUL

Born in Bavaria. He studied his art in Munich, and has devoted himself exclusively to painting genre subjects of peasant life, in no way distracted or diverted from his purpose by the influence of the ephemeral schools which flourish in Munich as elsewhere. His work is always characterized by great solidity, strength of effect and careful finish.

BOLDINI, GIOVANNI

Born at Ferrara, Italy, in 1845. He studied his art in Florence, and remained in his native country until 1872, when he went to Paris. In that city he soon made a reputation as a painter with brilliant technique, and his pictures attracted the notice of Fortuny, who not only became his friend, but influenced him very much in his work. However, not even so strong a personality as that of Fortuny could affect his style so far as to take away the charm of individuality, and he has always retained his own strong characteristics.

BONHEUR, FRANÇOIS AUGUSTE

Born at Bordeaux in 1824. He was the son of an unsuccessful artist, Raymond B. Bonheur, and the younger brother of Rosa Bonheur. The glamour of the reputation of the sister naturally kept the brother somewhat in the background, but his talents were recognized and esteemed by his contemporaries in the profession, and he received medals at Paris in 1852, 1857, 1859, 1861, and was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1867. His work is strong and faithful, and quite as striking in quality as that of his sister. Died in 1884.

BONNAT, LÉON JOSEPH FLORENTIN

Born at Bayonne in 1833. He first studied under Madrazo in Madrid, and after some time with this Spanish master he went to Paris and became a pupil of Léon Cogniet. In the competition for the Prix de Rome he took the second prize, which did not entitle him to a full scholarship. His friends, however, came to his assistance, and he spent four years studying in Italy, where he painted a good many Italian subjects, chiefly studies of peasant life. He has received many honors in his profession, the chief of which are medals at the Salon in 1861, 1863 and at the Exposition of 1867, and a medal of honor at the Salon in 1869. He was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1869, Officer in 1874, Commander in 1882 and Grand Commander in 1897. Member of the Institute of France.

BOUGUEREAU, WILLIAM ADOLPHE

Born at La Rochelle in 1825. He began life as a shopkeeper's assistant in his native town, and while engaged in this occupation in Bordeaux he attended the Alaux Art School, and made such progress that he gained the prize, exciting the dismay and the resentment of his fellow-students. He now resolved to become an artist, threw up his employment and painted portraits at a few francs each until he succeeded in saving enough money to take him to Paris. There he entered the École des Beaux Arts in the studio of Picot in 1843, and in 1850 won the Prix de Rome. After his four years' sojourn in Rome he returned to Paris well equipped to undertake the commissions for both public and private works which were speedily intrusted to him, and from that time on his career has been one of uninterrupted success. The following are a few of the honors he has received: Medals at the Salon in 1857 and the Expositions in 1855 and 1867. He was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1859, Officer in 1876, and Commander in 1885. He was elected a Mem-

BRASCASSAT, JACQUES RAYMOND

Born at Bordeaux in 1805. He first studied landscape art in Paris, but devoted his attention soon to animal painting, and is considered the founder of the school of which Troyon is the most eminent follower. He was a pupil of Richard and of Hersent, and gained the second prize for Historic Landscape in 1825. He painted for several years in Italy. He received medals at Paris in 1827, 1831 and 1837; was made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1837 and a Member of the Institute of France in 1846. Died in 1867.

BULL AND DOG

BRETON, JULES ADOLPHE

Born at Courrières, in France, in 1827. He studied under Drölling and Devigne, and made his first success in Paris as early as 1849. Within a very few years he established his reputation as a painter of peasant subjects, and when his picture "Blessing the Harvest" was bought by the French Government he took his place at once in the front rank of French artists. Many of his best pictures are now in the United States, and he is represented in most of the notable collections of modern art the world over. No artist has been more popular, and no one has been given a greater number of medals and other distinctions. He received medals at Paris in 1855, 1857, 1859, 1861, 1867, and the Medal of Honor in 1872. He was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1861, Officer in 1867 and Commander in 1889. He is a corresponding member of the Academies of Vienna, Stockholm, Madrid and London, and a Member of the Institute of France.

CABAT, LOUIS

Born in Paris in 1812. He was a pupil of Camille Flers, and was a successful landscape painter. Without being identified with any particular group, he occupied a dignified and influential position. He received medals at Paris in 1834 and 1867; was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1843 and Officer in 1855. He was elected a Member of the Institute of France in 1867, and Director of the French Academy at Rome in 1879.

CAZIN, JEAN CHARLES

Born at Samer, Picardy. He began his studies as a figure painter, became a pupil of Lecoq de Boisbaurdan and gained considerable reputation with figure subjects, receiving medals in 1876 and 1877. He turned his attention, however, to landscape, and his triumphs in that branch of art brought him into world-wide prominence. He was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1882, and previous to his death was made a Commander. Died in 1901.

CHAPLIN, CHARLES JOSHUA

Born at Les Andelys in 1825. He made his preliminary studies at the École des Beaux Arts in Paris, and was for some time in the studio of Drölling. Notwithstanding his training, he never entered upon the field of historical painting, but confined himself to a simple line of idealistic subjects, in which he has achieved distinction. He received medals at Paris in 1851, 1852 and 1865; was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1865, and Officer in 1877. Died 1891.

COOPER, THOMAS SIDNEY

Born at Canterbury, England, in 1803. He was a student of the schools of the Royal Academy, London, lived for some time in France and Belgium, and was for a few months a pupil of Verboeckhoven. He was elected an Associate of the Royal Academy in 1845 and a full member in 1867, and has received many foreign honors. He was a very conscientious and diligent worker, and his career was a most remarkable one, for he painted almost up to the day of his death, which occurred in 1902.

COROT, JEAN BAPTISTE CAMILLE

Born at Paris in 1796. His father, who was a well-to-do tradesman, at first apprenticed him to a linen draper, but finally yielded to his desires to become a painter and sent him to Paris, where he studied under Michallon and Bertin. He made several trips to Italy, and painted in that country many landscapes, mostly of the academic order. It was not until he was past forty years of age that he began to develop his art in the direction which made him famous. In this change from the formal academic style he was much influenced by Rousseau, but became, in his turn, a source of great influence on modern landscape art. He received medals at Paris in 1833, 1848, 1855 and 1867; was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1846 and Officer in 1867. Died in Paris in 1875.

COT, PIERRE AUGUSTE

Born at Bévarieux, France, in 1837. He began his studies in the Academy at Toulouse, and from there went to Paris, where he entered the École des Beaux Arts, where he took most of the important prizes. He was a pupil successively of Cabanel, Cogniet and Bouguereau. While with Cogniet he assisted him in the decoration of the great hall of the Hôtel de Ville. His ability and his talents as a designer brought him to the notice of Bouguereau, and he entered his studio and remained there for several years. His first works were similar in subject to those of his last master, but after the Exposition at Vienna in 1873, where he received a medal, he chiefly occupied himself with portraiture, although he worked occasionally on figure subjects, several of which were left by him in an unfinished state at the time of his death. Died in 1883.

COURBET, GUSTAVE

Born at Ornans in 1819. He was engaged in the study of the law when his disposition toward art began to manifest itself, and in 1839, at the end of two years, he went to Paris. There he studied in a somewhat irregular manner with various painters, the chief of whom was David d'Angers, and exhibited first in 1844. He became an active and aggressive realist, received medals at Paris in 1849, 1857 and 1861, but became involved in various quarrels, exhibited independently of the artistic organizations, refused to take from Emperor Napoleon III. the cross of the Legion of Honor, but accepted various foreign distinctions. During the Commune he was elected Minister of Fine Arts, and became chiefly notorious through the overthrow of the Colonne Vendôme, for which act he was first imprisoned, then exiled and condemned to bear the cost of restoring the monument. His art partook, naturally, much of the nature of the man, and is essentially bold and personal. Died in Switzerland in 1878.

COX, DAVID

Born near Birmingham, England, in 1783. He began his career as a scene painter in a Birmingham theatre, and went to London in 1803, where he became a teacher of drawing and painting, and practised his profession with great success. His name is identified with a flourishing school of English landscape painters, of which he was one of the leaders. In 1844 he settled at Harborne Heath, near Birmingham, where he died in 1859.

DARGELAS, HENRI

Born at Bordeaux in 1828. He studied under Picot, who at that time was a favorite master, but turned his attention to genre rather than to historical subjects, and was a frequent exhibitor at the Salon, where he received medals in 1867 and in 1881.

DAUBIGNY, CHARLES FRANÇOIS

Born at Paris in 1817. He came of a family of artists, and was reared in the profession. He was first a pupil of his father, and then studied under Paul Delaroche with the intention of becoming a figure painter. But he soon found that his inclinations were in the direction of landscape, and he devoted himself to that branch of the art. He began to exhibit in 1838, and in the course of ten years gained recognition, and, although the youngest of the Barbizon group, he was not the least esteemed among them. He painted particularly on the Seine, Marne and Oise rivers, making his studies from a floating studio. He received medals at Paris in 1848, 1853, 1857, 1859 and 1867; was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1859 and Officer in 1874. Died in 1878.

DE BEAUMONT, CHARLES ÉDOUARD

Born at Lannion, France, in 1821. He went to Paris as a student, and became the pupil of Boisselier. He first called attention to himself as a landscape painter, but he became interested in figures and made a considerable reputation as a painter of genre subjects as well as an illustrator of books. He exhibited first in the Salon in 1838.

THE PARROT	11

DELACROIX, FERDINAND VICTOR EUGÈNE

Born at Charenton in 1799. He made his début as a painter at the early age of twenty-three with his "Dante and Virgil," when he was still a pupil of Guérin. But he did not long follow the banner of the classicists, for he broke new ground for himself, travelled in England, Spain and North Africa, and, although always in feeble health, produced a marvellous number of pictures, covering a great range of subjects and notable for wonderful richness of color and boldness of execution. He received medals at Paris in 1824 and 1848, and the Medal of Honor at the Exposition in 1855. He was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1831, Officer in 1846 and Commander in 1855. He was a Member of the Institute of France. Died in 1863.

DE NEUVILLE, ALPHONSE MARIE

Born at Saint Omer, France, in 1836. His parents, who were rich and influential, intended him for an official career, but from the first his tastes inclined to the army, and finally he was sent to the military school at Lorient. During his brief stay there and also in the law school in Paris, where he attended to please his parents, he spent most of his time sketching, and finally determined to become a painter, notwithstanding the remonstrances of his family and friends. He studied with Delacroix and Picot, more as a friend than as a student, but his first pictures were not successful. The Franco-Prussian War gave him, however, the necessary stimulus and opportunity, and his pictures of that epoch are among the most remarkable war pictures ever painted. He received medals at Paris in 1859 and 1861; was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1873 and Officer in 1881. Died in 1885.

DIAZ DE LA PEÑA, NARCISSE VIRGILE

Born at Bordeaux in 1807. His parents were refugees from Spain, and, his father having died, his mother brought him to Paris. He had lost a leg through the bite of a poisonous insect, but succeeded in getting employment in the porcelain manufactory at Sèvres, where he worked for a while, and then set about painting little pictures of nymphs and cupids by himself. The fame of the Barbizon school attracted him to the forest of Fontainebleau, and under the influence of the painters there, chiefly of Rousseau, he developed his art and gained success as a landscape painter. He received medals at Paris in 1844, 1846 and 1848, and was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1851. Died in 1876.

DUPRÉ, JULES

Born at Nantes in 1812. As a lad he worked at painting porcelain in the Sèvres manufactory, but in his leisure he studied from nature, and in the course of time began to paint landscapes. He visited England, and was very much impressed by the work of Constable. On his return he exhibited two pictures in the Salon of 1833, and was at once acknowledged a master. With Rousseau, who was his lifelong friend, he became a leader of the Barbizon group, and held a distinguished position among his contemporaries as one of the founders of this school. He received medals at Paris in 1833 and 1867; was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1849 and Officer in 1870. Died in 1889.

Born at Leipsic in 1834. He was a student in the Leipsic Academy, and was brought up in the traditions of the German school of genre painting, from which he has not departed. He painted for some time in Dresden and in Munich, but finally settled in Düsseldorf in 1858.

Following closely the school of Gérôme, this artist finds his subjects in the Orient, and paints with great fidelity the details of Oriental architecture, the textures of the rich draperies and the types of the interesting peoples of the East.

FABRON, LOUIS

This follower of the Spanish-Italian school of water-color painting keeps up the tradition of the school in his lively studies of figures in costume, the most attractive of which are Orientals whose dress gives an opportunity for the skilful imitation of textures and for the employment of rich colors.

FOSTER, BIRKET

Born at North Shields, England, in 1825. He was a pupil of E. Landells, a well-known engraver of the time, and worked as an illustrator until 1859, when he began to exhibit as a water-color painter. His choice of subjects and the skill with which he handled his material soon made him popular, and established his reputation as one of the leaders of the English school of water-color painters. He was elected Associate of the Royal Water Color Society in 1860, and a year later was made full member. Died in 1901.

FRANÇAIS, FRANÇOIS LOUIS

Born at Plombières, Vosges, France, in 1814. He studied his profession in Paris under Gignoux and later with Corot. Although he was strongly influenced by both these masters, his tendency toward the formal and rather academic style of composition was never greatly modified by the example of the latter artist, and he remained loyal to his early traditions, producing much agreeable, dignified and noble work. He received medals at Paris in 1841, 1848, 1855 and 1867, and a medal of honor at the Exposition in 1878. He was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1853 and Officer in 1867. Died in 1897.

FRAPPA, JOSÉ

Born at St. Étienne, France, in 1854. As a youth he worked in a silk manufactory designing patterns for silks. By the time he was twenty years of age he had saved some money and, ambitious to become an artist, he went to Paris, studied under Pils and, later, under Compté and Vibert. He has apparently been more strongly influenced by the latter artist than by his other masters, and has gained a wide reputation as a painter of genre subjects.

FROMENTIN, EUGÈNE

Born at La Rochelle in 1820. He was the son of a successful lawyer and intended to follow his father's profession. But after receiving his diploma in Paris, at the age of twenty-three, he was taken ill, and as a pastime took up the study of drawing. He soon discovered that his tastes were stronger in the direction of art than toward the practice of law, and he became a pupil of Cabat and Rémond. He had visited Algeria as a youth, and, attracted by Marilhat's paintings of the Orient, now made up his mind to return to that country. He accordingly spent three years there—1846 and 1848 and 1852. In 1847 he first exhibited at the Salon, and in a few years was recognized as the most sympathetic and poetical painter of Oriental subjects, and became, indeed, the leader of a school. Meanwhile he established his reputation as a brilliant and facile writer, not only as a critic of art, but as a novelist. He received medals at the Paris Salon in 1849, 1857 and 1859, and at the Exposition in 1867. He was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1859 and Officer in 1869. Died in 1876.

GÉRÔME, JEAN LÉON

Born at Vesoul, France, in 1824. He went to Paris in 1841, and entered the École des Beaux Arts, becoming the pupil of Paul Delaroche, whom he accompanied to Italy three years later. On his return he studied with Gleyre, and in 1847 exhibited at the Salon a picture, "Cocks Fighting," which won him a medal. During the next fifteen or twenty years he travelled in various countries and painted a wide range of subjects, from the Oriental to the classical, exhibiting in all of them the same irreproachable accuracy of execution and profound observation. A little later he turned his attention to sculpture, and he has produced several statues of great merit. His serious purpose in art, coupled with his mastery of his method and his wide knowledge, has gained for him a place in modern art in which he has no rival. He has received most of the honors that an artist can have, and among them may be enumerated medals at the Paris Salon in 1847 and 1848 and at the Exposition in 1855; Member of the Institute of France in 1865; Medal of Honor at the Exposition in 1867, at the Salon in 1874; Medal for Sculpture and Medal of Honor at the Exposition in 1878. He was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1855, Officer in 1867 and Commander in 1878.

HANOTEAU, HECTOR

Born at Decize, Nièvre, France, in 1823. He went early to Paris and studied there under Gigoux. He has had a successful career, and has made himself known for his agreeable rendering of Nature in her pleasant moods. He received medals at the Paris Salon in 1864, 1868 and 1869, and was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1870.

HÉBERT, ANTOINE AUGUSTE ERNEST

Born at Grenoble in 1817. He was intended by his family for the profession of law, studied in the Lycée at Grenoble, and afterwards in the École de Droit at Paris. During his studentship he frequently worked at sculpture in the studio of David d'Angers, and also became a friend of Paul Delaroche, through whose influence he determined to become a painter. He sent a picture to the Salon of 1839, which was bought by the Government. He thereupon entered the École des Beaux Arts, and in due time gained the Prix de Rome and was fairly launched on a successful career. He received a medal at the Paris Salon in 1851, and at the Expositions in 1855 and 1867. He was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1853, Officer in 1867 and Commander in 1874, Director of the Academy of France at Rome in 1866 and Member of the Institute of France in 1874. Medal of Honor in 1895.

HEILBUTH, FERDINAND

Born at Hamburg in 1826. He studied long in Paris, and became a naturalized French citizen. He is said to have been influenced by Alfred Stevens in his art, but his pictures, with their piquancy, their freshness and their originality of impression, scarcely show this. They are essentially modern and essentially French. He received medals at the Paris Salon in 1857, 1859 and 1861; was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1861 and Officer in 1881. Died at Paris in 1889.

HENNER, JEAN JACQUES

Born at Bernwiller, Alsace, in 1829. His father was a peasant and without means, but the municipality, after the young student had shown promising talent in the studio of Gabriel Guérin at Strasbourg, sent him to Paris, where he entered the École des Beaux Arts and gained the Prix de Rome in 1858, while a pupil of Drölling and of Picot. He spent five years in Italy, and afterwards travelled in various countries in Europe. Attention was first called to the great qualities of his work during his scholarship in Rome, and his "Susannah," exhibited in 1865, established his reputation once for all. He has been a consistent idealist all his life, and his work combines the great charm of purity with a virile strength of effect. He received medals at the Paris Salon in 1863, 1865 and 1866, and at the Exposition in 1878. He was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1873 and Officer in 1878. Medal at the Exposition in 1878; Member of the Institute in 1889.

HÉREAU, JULES

Born at Paris in 1830. He was one of a large coterie who threw themselves heart and soul into the art movement of the time, and he became a pupil of Troyon and a devoted follower of the school. His landscapes, usually with sheep or cattle as a prominent feature, are solid, strong in effect and vigorously executed. He received medals at the Paris Salon in 1865 and 1868. Died in 1879.

ISABEY, EUGÈNE LOUIS GABRIEL

Born at Paris in 1804. He was the son of a well-known miniature painter, Jean Baptiste Isabey, and was the pupil of his father. He began his career as a genre painter, but shortly began to paint marines, and, indeed, during his whole professional life, more than sixty years, he divided his time between these two branches of art. In 1830 he was appointed royal marine painter with the French expedition to Algeria, and although he executed many important commissions for sea pictures, he continued to paint those remarkably facile, vivacious and rich-toned figure pictures for which he is now chiefly known. He was at one time very successful as a water-color painter and also as a lithographer. He received medals at the Paris Salon in 1824 and 1827, and at the Exposition in 1855; was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1832 and Officer in 1852. Died in 1886.

JACQUE, CHARLES ÉMILE

Born at Paris in 1813. In early life he was apprenticed to a map engraver, and during his enforced term of service in the army he practised wood engraving and etching, and after leaving the army devoted himself to these branches of the profession. It was through these mediums that he first gained public attention, but it was not until 1861, after he had been painting sixteen years, that he was accepted as a painter. He had a great fondness for animals, particularly for sheep and pigs, and not only bred poultry, but wrote a book on the subject. He was the last survivor of the Barbizon group, and, unlike most of his friends, ended his life in comparative affluence. He received medals at the Paris Salon in 1861, 1863 and 1864, and at the Expositions in 1867 and 1889, and was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1867. Died in 1894.

Born at New York in 1827. He showed early in life a distinct aptitude and a taste for art, and received at one time a few lessons from J. F. Cropsey, N.A. He has never been abroad, and although he has admired and studied the works of European masters of landscape, he has worked in his own way, which has proved a very successful and individual one. He was made a National Academician in 1862, received a medal at the Centennial Exhibition in 1876 and was one of the founders of the Artists' Fund Society.

LAMBINET, ÉMILE

Born at Versailles, France, in 1815. He was first a pupil of Boisselier, but studied subsequently with Drölling and Horace Vernet, and sought the motive for his early pictures in North Africa, in the Orient and in Holland. He finally devoted himself almost exclusively to domestic landscape, and particularly to that of the Seine near Bougival, where he lived. He received medals at the Paris Salon in 1843, 1853 and 1857, and was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1867. Died in 1878.

LEADER, BENJAMIN WILLIAM

Born at Worcester, England, in 1831. He showed early in life a decided talent for painting and, after some preliminary studies, went to London and entered the schools of the Royal Academy. Figure painting and sculpture alone are taught in this school, but he was not diverted from his purpose to become a landscape painter, and in a short time began to exhibit. His exceptional skill and his choice of subjects soon made him popular, and he has long been a most successful painter of domestic landscapes. He was elected an Associate of the Royal Academy in 1883 and a Member in 1896.

LELOIR, MAURICE

Born at Paris in 1853. He belongs to a famous family of artists, and was a pupil of his father, J. B. Auguste Leloir, and of his elder brother Louis. He, naturally enough, has been much influenced by his masters and by his surroundings, and continues to paint genre subjects with invariable skill and sentiment. He received a medal at the Exposition in 1878, and was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1895.

Born at Brussels, Belgium, in 1796. He began his career as a lithographer, and for many years drew on stone with great success. But he was not satisfied with this medium, and occasionally painted a small genre picture, and soon gained a wide reputation in this line. He was for years the professor of drawing in the military school of Brussels, and was made a member of the Academies of Antwerp and Brussels. He was made Chevalier of the Order of Leopold, received a medal at the Exposition in 1855, and was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor. Died in 1877.

MADRAZO, RAIMUNDO DE

Born at Rome in 1841. His father and his grandfather before him were artists, his brother is an artist, and Fortuny was his brother-in-law, so he may be said to have been born and bred in the profession. He studied first with his father, who was at the head of the Madrid Academy, and then went to Paris, entered the École des Beaux Arts under Cogniet and studied later under Winterhalter. Intimately associated with the famous group of Spanish-French painters of whom Fortuny was the chief, he has made a wide reputation for skilful technique and vivacity of color. His first great success was made at Paris at the Exposition in 1878, where he received a first-class medal and was made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor. At the Exposition of 1889 he received a medal and was made Officer of the Legion of Honor.

MAUVE, ANTON

Born at Zaandam, Holland, in 1838. He was a pupil of P. F. Van Os, and from his master acquired the habit of painstaking finish which is exemplified in his early works. But after leaving his master he speedily acquired a more free and broad manner, and his work gained also in sentiment and refinement of tone. Both in water color and in oil he has rendered the charm of Holland and of Dutch life in an individual and sympathetic way, and his pictures are full of subtle qualities which are eminently personal. He received medals at the Vienna, Philadelphia, Amsterdam, Antwerp and Paris Expositions. Died in 1888.

MEYER VON BREMEN, JOHAN GEORG

Born at Bremen in 1813. His family name was Meyer, but he was called von Bremen from his birth-place. He began his preliminary studies in his native city, but soon went to Düsseldorf, the Mecca of Art at that time, and studied in the Academy under Sohn and Schadow. After leaving the Academy he painted, at first, large religious pictures, and then turned his attention gradually to peasant genre, taking his subjects from life in the valleys of the Bavarian and Swiss mountains, where he was a frequent traveller. He was a most popular painter, and was a highly esteemed professor in the Academy at Berlin. Among other honors he was made a Member of the Amsterdam Academy, and he received the gold medal of Prussia in 1850, and other medals in Berlin, Philadelphia, etc. Died in 1886.

MICHEL, GEORGES

Born at Paris in 1763. He had a strange and checkered career, for he ran away with a laundress in his teens, restored pictures and earned money in various other ways to support a large family, and sketched and painted whenever he could buy, beg or borrow materials. Through all this he had a distinct and individual purpose in his art, an intention doubtless founded on his study of the old Dutch landscapists, which he carried out so thoroughly that he, although unrecognized during his life, is now esteemed as the forerunner of Rousseau and of his school. His pictures, which are seldom signed, are easily distinguishable from their great breadth of effect and solidity of treatment. Died in 1843.

MILLET, JEAN FRANÇOIS

Born at Gruchy, in the Commune of Gréville, France, in 1814. He worked on his father's farm until he was twenty years of age, and as he was constantly drawing in his leisure moments, it was decided that he should study art. He consequently went to Cherbourg and became a pupil of Mouchel and Langlois. He had been in Cherbourg but two months when his father died, and he was obliged to return to the plough. However, he kept on with his drawing, and three years later the municipality of Cherbourg voted him a subsidy to pursue his studies at Paris. He accordingly entered the École des Beaux Arts there in the studio of Delaroche. But he had no sympathy with academic art, and soon left the school and began to paint small pictures. In 1848 he sold his first picture, "The Winnower," and went to Barbizon. His pictures, at first unrecognized, gradually gained public attention and esteem, and at the Exposition of 1867 his reputation was finally assured. He finished only about eighty oil paintings in all. He received medals at the Salon in 1853 and 1864, the Grand Medal at the Exposition in 1867, and was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1868. Died in 1875.

NICOL, ERSKINE

Born at Leith, Scotland, in 1825. He began life as a house-painter, and while he was thus engaged he studied drawing in the Academy in Edinburgh. He became, later, the instructor of drawing in the high school of his native town, passed some years in Dublin as a drawing master and finally settled in London in 1863. He has long been known as a popular painter of domestic genre subjects, many of them of a humorous nature, and is greatly esteemed as a colorist. He is a Member of the Royal Scottish Academy and was elected an Associate of the Royal Academy in London in 1866.

O'NEIL, G. B.

This artist is one of a few genre painters whose work lends itself particularly to reproduction. Somewhat in the vein of the English painters of the eighteenth century, his subjects often recall those of Wilkie and Morland, and are usually popular through the medium of engravings.

PALMAROLI, VINCENTE

Born at Madrid, Spain, in 1835. He studied at the Academy of Fine Arts, Madrid, under Frederico Madrazo, and later continued his studies in Rome, where he became, after some years' residence, the Director of the Spanish Academy there. He is well known as a portrait painter, but more widely recognized, perhaps, as a painter of historical genre subjects. He received a medal at the Exposition at Paris in 1867.

Born at Basseto, Italy, in 1826. He was a pupil of Ciceri in Italy, and afterwards a student under Isabey and Rousseau in France. After his preliminary studies he went to the Orient and spent several years painting in Turkey, Persia, Arabia and Egypt, accumulating a mass of material and innumerable motives, which he has employed to great advantage in the production of his vigorous, characteristic and brilliant pictures. He received medals at Paris in 1859, 1863, 1864 and 1867 and a Grand Medal of Honor at the Exposition in 1878; was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1868 and Officer in 1878. He received many other distinctions, and was honorary professor of the Academies of Parma and Turin. Died in 1899.

Most successful painters of historical genre have studied with profit the Dutch masters, and this artist is no exception to the rule. Born at Pierrelaye, France. His career has been distinguished by a steadily growing popularity which has kept pace with his progress, and he has recorded many successes in landscape art. ## PERRAULT, LÉON BAZILE

Born at Poitiers, France. He was a student at the École des Beaux Arts, and a pupil of Picot and Bouguereau. The influence of the latter master has been the stronger, and his pictures are often suggestive of him. They are painted with conscientious care, and are usually life-sized domestic genre subjects. He exhibited first at the Salon in 1861, received medals at the Salon in 1864 and 1865, and was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1887.

POLLET, VICTOR FLORENCE

Born at Paris, France, in 1811. He studied in the École des Beaux Arts under Delaroche and Richomme, and in the competition won the Grand Prix de Rome in 1838. His stay in Rome did not seem to have converted him to classicism, for he devoted himself as a painter chiefly to genre subjects. He received a medal at the Salon in 1845, and was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1855. Died in 1882.

THE CONVALESCENT

PROTAIS, PAUL ALEXANDRE

Born at Paris in 1826. He was in a sense court painter of France, for he was a friend of the Imperial family. When he died, the Empress Eugenie sent the following message to the brothers of the painter: "I am deeply grieved at the death of your brother. France loses in him a distinguished artist, and I a faithful friend." His pictures are comparatively rare, and the reason for this is given in a letter to an American client, written about fifteen years ago, in which he says that he has never painted for dealers, but only for public institutions and on commissions from private individuals. Died in 1890.

Born at Paris in 1812. He was the son of a tailor, and, having a taste for mathematics, he was intending to enter the polytechnic school, but, fortunately for art, he entered the École des Beaux Arts instead, and became the pupil of Lethière. Like many others, he could not accept the traditions of the Academy, and, leaving the school, went direct to nature. He first went to Fontainebleau in 1833, and in the following year painted the first picture which attracted much attention, the "Côtes de Grandville." During twelve or fifteen years following this success he was unrecognized by the artistic institution, and it was not until 1855, indeed, that his reputation was at last established, and he was properly honored as a master of the French landscape school. But years of poverty and the weariness of his long struggle for recognition had told upon his health, and finally he broke down under the strain of his wife's insanity, and under the attacks of his opponents in the profession, who bitterly resented his success. He received medals at the Salon in 1834, 1849 and 1855, and a Grand Medal of Honor at the Exposition in 1867. He was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1852. Died in 1867.

This artist, who has devoted himself exclusively to costume subjects, has gained a considerable reputation for his accurate and vivacious studies of figures, which are executed in the so-called Spanish manner. SIMONETTI, ATTILIO

Born at Rome, Italy. He was one of the coterie of Roman painters who fraternized with the Spanish artists and who followed closely the methods of the school which flourished in Rome during the residence of Fortuny in that city. He became a friend and a pupil of Fortuny, and founded his style on him, confining himself, however, to much less elaborate subjects. He was appointed professor in the Academy at Naples, and established himself in that city. He received the title of Cavaliere from the King of Italy, and has gained various other distinctions.

TISSOT, J. JAMES

Born at Nantes, France, in 1836. He was for some time a student in Antwerp under Baron Leys, by whom he was strongly influenced, and his first pictures bore a very strong impression of his admiration for his master. He studied in Paris under Flandrin and Lamothe, and spent years in Paris and in London painting scenes of every-day life, always investing them with his own particular charm. For fifteen years or so he was engaged in painting a series of water colors illustrating the life of Christ. He received a medal at the Salon in 1866. Died in 1902.

TROYON, CONSTANT

Born at Sèvres in 1810. He worked for a while painting porcelain in the manufactory at Sèvres, at the same time with Diaz and Dupré, and, like them, soon determined to devote himself to landscape art. He studied under Riocreux at Paris, and first exhibited at the Salon in 1833. Up to the time of his visit to Holland, in 1847, he painted landscapes exclusively, and became well known in this branch of art. His studies in the Netherlands apparently changed his purpose thoroughly, and from that time on he made his landscapes subordinate to his cattle. His "Oxen Going to Work," now in the Louvre, was painted in 1855, and represents him in the apogee of his career. He was a legitimate successor of Brascassat, but his art has no rival in its grandeur of simplicity, virility and serenity. He received medals at the Salon in 1838, 1840, 1846, 1848 and 1855, and was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1849. Died in 1865.

TURNER, JOSEPH MALLORD WILLIAM

Born in 1775. He showed decided aptitude for drawing at a very early age, and, after coloring prints and washing in backgrounds for architectural drawings for some time, became a student of the Royal Academy schools at the age of fourteen years. Up to the year 1802 he was chiefly occupied with water colors, and the collection of studies in monochrome, which he called "Liber Studiorum," in imitation of Claude's "Liber Veritatis," is one of the monuments of his ambition to rival this master. From this date on he painted mostly in oil, and produced the remarkable works for which he is justly famous. He made various trips to Italy, and accumulated a large fortune from the sale of his pictures. He was elected an Associate of the Royal Academy at the early age of twenty-four years, and made a Member in 1802. Died in 1851.

Born in New Jersey in 1855. He graduated as an engineer in the School of Mines, Columbia College, and studied landscape painting under A. H. Wyant. He has painted a large number of successful pictures from motives found in this country as well as from subjects chosen during his frequent trips abroad. He is a Member of the Society of American Artists and an Associate of the National Academy of Design.

VAN MARCKE, ÉMILE

Born at Sèvres in 1827. His father was a landscape painter of Flemish descent, and his mother a painter of flowers. He was a successful art student, and, marrying early, secured through his father-in-law, who was the director of the works at Sèvres, the position of decorator of porcelain, which he occupied for nine years. Troyon frequently visited Sèvres, made the acquaintance of the young porcelain painter and encouraged him to study nature. This he finally did, and opened a studio in Paris. His early pictures show Troyon's influence very strongly, but the later ones are quite individual, and are masterly in drawing, color and arrangement. He received medals at the Salon in 1867, 1869 and 1870, and at the Exposition in 1878. He was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1872. Died in 1891.

VIBERT, JEHAN GEORGES

Born at Paris in 1840. He studied at the École des Beaux Arts first under Picot and then with Barsias, and turned his attention at the outset of his career to historical subjects. These pictures were not successful, and he struck out a line of his own in cynical or in humorous motives and made a great success of it. He has a high reputation as a painter in water colors, and was one of the leaders in the movement which resulted in the foundation of the Society of French Water Color Painters, a powerful artistic organization. He received medals at the Salon in 1864 and 1868, at the Expositions in 1867 and 1878, and was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1870.

VOLLON, ANTOINE

Born at Lyons, 1833. He was a pupil of the Academy of Lyons, but spent most of his life in Paris, where he came to study under Ribot. Although he is known as the master of the art of painting still life, he has achieved great success with figures and with landscapes, which he first began to exhibit in 1876. He received medals at the Salon in 1865, 1868 and 1869, and at the Exposition in 1878. He was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1870, Officer in 1878 and Member of the Institute of France in 1897. Died in 1900.

WORMS, JULES

Born at Paris in 1837. He was a pupil of Lafosse, and to his careful training is due the conscientious execution which is notable in the genre pictures for which this artist is famous. He has never left the field of domestic and humorous subjects, and is well known for both his oil and water-color works. He received medals at the Salon in 1868 and 1869, at the Expositions of 1867 and 1878, and was made Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1878.

ZAMACOIS, EDUARDO

Born at Bilbao in 1842. He was first a pupil of Balaco in his native town, and then of Frederico de Madrazo in the Madrid Academy. While he was still a youth he went to Paris and studied under Meissonier, becoming an active member of the group of talented Spanish painters who were fast making enduring reputations. He first exhibited at the Salon in 1863, and his brilliant costume pictures, full of life and wit, were soon the rage. He received a medal at the Exposition in 1867. Died in 1871.

ZIMMERMANN, REINHARD SEBASTIAN

Born at Hagenau, Switzerland, in 1815. He studied at the Munich Academy of Fine Arts, and was chiefly influenced by Robert Eberle. He painted genre pictures for a time, and then, in 1844, went to Paris, where he passed two years, chiefly in painting portraits. After visiting England and the Netherlands, he returned to Munich in 1847, and devoted himself to painting genre subjects, many of them of a humorous character. He was elected a Member of the Berlin Academy in 1886.

A summer afternoon in a pleasant, rolling country, with a sky full of slowly moving cumulus clouds. There are hills beyond a distant sheet of water and a dense wood bordering a flower-strewn meadow, with here and there a large tree, near one of which is a small group of figures, suggesting the proximity of a country residence.

Dear Mr. Lyall: I write to express my thanks and gratification at the selection you have made in your purchase at my sale, "Meadow at Ramapo."

You may be pleased to know that it was one of my pets, and regarded by me as one of the most entirely successful studies from nature I have ever made. I am more than delighted that it has found such friends for a resting-place.

Through a narrow rift in a stormy sky, where the brilliant sunset light breaks through near the horizon, comes a strongly reflected glow which, in the mystery of gathering twilight, touches sharply a great white farm-horse drawing a plough held by a peasant. Among the great clods of newly turned earth is seen the stooping or kneeling figure of a peasant woman, and beyond are green meadows bordered by woods, with here and there laborers at work. The strong blue and red trappings of the horse make a focus of intensely deep and rich color. The foreground, which is divided by a rough path, is covered with strongly growing weeds and wild flowers.

A typical French village, with its bald façades, blank walls, and red-tiled roofs, is seen against a placid, almost cloudless spring sky. Cutting the broken line of roof on the left, a slender fruit tree rises with a network of delicate branches and a profusion of pink blossoms. The whole foreground, an area of cultivated land, broken here and there by spots of verdure and cut by a narrow stream running between grassy banks, is in shadow full of reflected light. The figures of two girls washing clothes in the stream give life to the scene and add to the impression of primitive simplicity of intention which is the keynote of the picture. 89—A STROLLING MERCHANT

In one of the narrow, dusky streets of the native quarter of Cairo, a turbaned vender of rich second-hand garments and choice weapons is crying his wares. In his right hand he carries a Persian helmet with intricate chasing, and in his left, resting against a mass of soft silk draperies, he holds a long gun, inlaid with mother-of-pearl. Near by are scavenging dogs, and in the gloom behind and to the left are seen the figures of bargaining natives. To the right is a long vista through a crowded street with a sea of white turbans and, above, the high façades of native houses and the minaret of a mosque against a bit of blue sky.

90—THE CARDINAL'S BLESSING

This picture illustrates an incident in a crowded street in the old and populous part of Rome, where a procession of monks, headed by a cardinal and bearing a banner, halts for a moment under an archway while his eminence, in full robes, lays his hands in blessing on the head of a kneeling man. On either side of the street are groups of people huddled against the wall to give room for the procession, some of them kneeling, all of them devoutly interested. Under the arch and above the roof of it is seen the intense blue Italian sky.

This is essentially a cattle piece, for the animals, a red and a white cow, form the one important feature of the composition. They stand, in the strong light of mid-afternoon, head to head, caressing one another after the manner of their kind. Close behind them is a mass of wild flowers, indicating the uncultivated border of a wheat field, and beyond is a narrow strip of low country in the distance. The sky which occupies two-thirds of the picture is of a clear deep blue with a few drifting clouds near the zenith.

On the right a grassy eminence, surmounted by a clump of trees, slopes to a river which leads into the picture from the left and disappears, winding away beyond a tree-crowned point. The sky is covered with a lofty stratum of vapor, showing here and there a note of blue and accented by the forms of cumulus clouds drifting below it. The moisture-laden atmosphere softens the sunlight, which throws cool shadows on the grass and intensifies the contrast between trees and sky.

North Africa is full of surprises in architecture, and the subject of this picture shows to what an extent the artist was impressed by the juxtaposition of modern and ancient structures. A many-arched and half-ruined aqueduct, leading to an acropolis of moderate height crowned with simple massive buildings whose rigid lines are agreeably broken by a tower or two, occupies the middle distance, leaving a glimpse of distant hills beyond on the left. The southern sunlight forces into strong contrast the masses of architecture and brings out the rich and kaleidoscopic-colored garments of a group of Arab horsemen caracoling over the rough ground as they approach the citadel. The deep blue sky is broken by a few gray clouds, and patches of green turf and the familiar aloe enrich the rough ground surrounding the buildings.

94—PRISE D'UNE BATTERIE

This is a battle scene, presumably an episode of the Crimean War, with a multitude of small figures. The first line of a strong force of Zouaves has just charged a field battery, and a captured gun, surrounded by the enemy's slain and the scattered dead and wounded of the victors, shows that the fight for the piece has been a stubborn one. To the right, and sweeping away in a curve to the smoky distance, a second line of men is rushing on to the support of the advance, which is still engaged with the enemy. Through the thin veil of drifting smoke are dimly seen distant fields and troops in regular formation.

The season of late summer, when the earth is carpeted with lush vegetation and when, at sunset, a delicate warm glow bathes the whole landscape, has often impressed this artist, who with brush, and also with pen in verse, has rendered the charm of the hour and the idyllic side of peasant life. The incidents in this picture are in their favorite setting. On a wide area of cultivated fields, over which steals the first twilight shadow, a number of peasant women are finishing their day's task. A warm glow of reflected light from the sun below the horizon embraces the whole landscape, softens the sharp crescent of the new moon, and the brilliancy of the light of the evening star. Near the middle of the picture, toward the left, and seen partly against the sky and partly against the wide extent of the field, two women are filling a sack with green fodder and, beside them, a little girl with jug and sickle is signalling to a distant comrade who, following her mates, is about to turn homeward where the distant village spire is seen among the trees.

96—L'ENLÈVEMENT DE REBECCA

The motive of this picture is found in Sir Walter Scott's novel of "Ivanhoe," and the incident illustrated is the abduction of the Jewish maiden Rebecca by the followers of the Templar Brian de Bois Guilbert. A Moorish horseman on a mottled gray Arab charger lifts from the arms of a foot-soldier the inert form of the Jewish maiden to place her behind him on his saddle. The group, which is full of movement and of strong contrasts of light and of color, is supported by the figure of a galloping cavalier to the right and below, while in the background are the towers of Front de Bœuf's castle all ablaze, sending out great clouds of tawny smoke which half cover the expanse of blue sky. In the foreground are a drum, a spear, shield, and a quiver of arrows.

97—THE DESTRUCTION OF THE TELEGRAPH LINE:

An Episode in the Franco-German War

M.K.C. No. 4.178 - # xxx

This picture was the last important work undertaken by the artist before his premature death. In an interesting letter, a translation of which is given below, he gives a picturesque account of the incident he illustrated and of the circumstances attending the painting of the picture.

Height, 47 inches; width, 32½ inches.

My Dear Friend: My picture represents an episode in the Franco-German War—the destruction, by Prussian dragoons, of the telegraph of Étretat in Normandy.

The incident is described in a very vivid way by Ludovic Halévy in his book, “L’Invasion.” I have not changed his description and have added simply the character of the curé who advises the old mayor to accept the inevitable with resignation.

The landscape resembles Étretat only very vaguely. Like all Norman villages on the coast, it is composed of dilapidated old houses nestling at the foot of great chalk cliffs. In order to depict Étretat exactly it would have been necessary to bring in the casino—and that would have detracted from the picturesqueness of the picture—so I have omitted it. I have also changed the uniforms of the Prussian dragoons; they belonged actually to the guards, who have scarlet collars. I took, however, another regiment, because I thought the yellow looked better.

You would find all the details in Ludovic Halévy's description too long; so I give the incident in the following few lines: The dragoons have suddenly entered the village; the cry is heard from all sides, "The Prussians! The Prussians!" The crowd gathers; the mayor is sent for, a good old fisherman called Father Vatiget (I knew him well). He puts his tricolor sash over his coat and comes to parley with the chief of the Prussian detachment. The latter points to his men who are destroying the telegraph by cutting the wires with their sabres and sawing the posts at the bottom, etc., and says: "If you repair what we have cut down, or allow it to be repaired, we shall burn the village and impose on it a fine of ten thousand francs." Halévy, who was present, and who may be seen in my picture standing behind the curé, cannot refrain from saying: "Excuse me, Captain, I think you have made a mistake; you should say, 'We shall impose a fine of ten thousand francs on the village and then we shall burn it,' for if you begin by burning it, I think your fine will be very much lessened." The Prussian officer, a little surprised at first, finally answers him coldly: "You are quite right; we shall begin with the fine and we shall burn the village afterwards."

After having finished their work the Prussians left Étretat to the sound of the trumpet. Some days afterwards the Havre sharpshooters came and repaired the telegraph line, the armistice followed, and the village was saved.

This, my dear friend, is the little anecdote on which my picture is founded. I have tried to reproduce as closely as possible the type of our Norman people. To do this I have made several studies at the sea-coast, and stayed with Duez, whom you know. As to the Germans, there is a subaltern officer of the dragoons whose back is towards you in the picture, with high broad shoulders, who looks like a Pomeranian—the captain with the dark beard resembles very much a lieutenant-colonel of dragoons whom I knew at Metz, and whose name was Brawns—almost an English name. The others are less important.

Yours as ever,

(Signed) ALPH. DE NEUVILLE.

From the arched gateway of a strong citadel a large band of Moorish horsemen is dashing out, as if to surprise a besieging force. On the right, and near the foreground, are two turbaned soldiers, armed with long guns and with pistols in belt, one on a light chestnut, the other on a black stallion, reining up with difficulty their eager animals, to receive the last word of command from an under officer on a white horse near by. The brilliant sunshine touches with sparkling lights the figures of the men, the arms and accoutrements, the horses, and the lines of the citadel walls, and throws deep, warm shadows on the rough ground. To the left, in the distance, is a crowd of horsemen in a cloud of dust, and overhead a tender blue sky.

A barefooted peasant maiden is carrying her curly-haired baby brother pick-a-back through the forest, and has just crossed a shallow stream which trickles over a rocky bed. The child wears but a single garment and the maiden is dressed in a long-sleeved white chemise, a deep wine-colored bodice, and a blue petticoat from which is turned back a purple apron. Her sole ornament is a string of corals around the neck. To the left and behind the figures, which are life-sized, is a vista along the woodland path, with here and there a flicker of light and a glimpse of the sky beyond; to the right, distant sturdy tree-trunks are brought into prominence by a passage of light in the extreme distance.

The distant cone of Vesuvius, the Roman ruins in the foreground and the busy landing place in the middle distance, suggest Capri as the motive of this picture. 105—SPRINGTIME “O primavera! gioventù dell’ anno!

O gioventù! primavera della vita!!!”

To illustrate an allegory of springtime, but with no effort to escape distinct realism, the artist has chosen to develop the motive in a new direction. A youth and maiden in classical dress, the former in a dull red tunic and the latter in white diaphanous drapery, are seated in a swing which hangs from a tree in the heart of a forest of tropical luxuriance of growth. The maiden clings trustingly to her lover, with both her arms around his neck. Butterflies flutter suggestively above them. A shaft of sunlight accents the lines of the figures here and there, sharpens the forms of the near foliage, and flickers on the rough ground.
